I wanted to wear a shirt with a short skirt but he said that was not comfortable for me and you should try on the dress .he knows me.

After two years of breaking up with Hesam, I wanted to connect with a reddish-blond guy with casually dressed, a guy always with shorts and a loose jacket and sneakers but Hesam, had made me used to relationships with handsome men.

AI version:

Hesam was my ex-boyfriend, and he used to be a bodybuilder. He had a distinctive (specific) style of wearing boots with jeans and tight T-shirts to show off his muscles. I once bought him a necklace and a ring for his birthday, and even after we broke up, he continued wearing them. In the summer, he would wear glasses, a hat, and loose pants that were reminiscent of hip-hop fashion.

On one occasion, we attended a party together and Hesam looked quite handsome. He had chosen to wear a fitted suit with a black tie, while I wore a long black dress with a shoulder bag and sandals. Since it was a cold night, I also wore a windbreaker on top. Initially, I wanted to wear a shirt with a short skirt, but Hesam suggested that I try the dress instead. He knew me well.

After two years of breaking up with Hesam, I found myself attracted to a reddish-blond guy who often dressed casually in shorts, a loose jacket, and sneakers. However, Hesam had set the standard for me, and I had become accustomed to being with handsome men.
